We’d love to have you come by the library for a personal tour and to browse both our academic and recreational materials. Questions? Contact Abbie Basile or 822-5303.
As we head into the final leg of the U.S. presidential race, it’s helpful to know whether the politicians and their staff are speaking the truth, telling lies, or landing somewhere in the middle.

These two websites are the leaders in evaluating political statements. Here’s a quick overview of both.

FactCheck  factcheck.org

Overview: Checks the truthfulness of what is said by elected officials and others in politics. FactCheck is a project of the Annenberg Public Policy Center of the University of Pennsylvania.

Funding: From 2005-2010, they were funded by the Annenberg Foundation and the Flora Foundation. Since 2010, they have accepted individual donations. They list donors who give $1K or more.

Notable: Check out their Weekly Quiz page for short quizzes on current events.

PolitiFact  www.politifact.com

Overview: Provides ratings on the accuracy of statements by elected officials and others involved in politics. It’s run by editors and reporters from the Tampa Bay Times, an independent newspaper in Florida. Winner of the 2009 Pulitzer Prize for coverage of the 2008 U.S. election.

Funding: From the Tampa Bay Times paper, which receives its revenue from subscribers and advertisers.

Notable: Check out their Pants on Fire page for interesting findings on recent political talking points.

New Displays on Core Curriculum

This fall, we started a program of semester-long displays to support the TCC curriculum. Our inaugural display is “United States History to 1865.” Please stop by to see the many interdisciplinary resources available for borrowing.

Library questions? Comments? Suggestions? ChesLibrary@tcc.edu